

Editor of Notornis

Due to a change in personal circumstances Leigh Bull Editor of Notornis has notified Council of the need to stand down from this role.

Expressions of interest by suitably qualified people are invited to edit the Premier Science Journal of the Society.

The Editor of Notornis is an officer of the Society who is responsible for the timely publication of Notornis and any agreed supplements and for advising Council on Editorial needs and other matters.

As Editor the incumbent is the contact for authors to send draft manuscripts too. The Editor has the role of assessing and giving feedback to Authors. The Editor undertakes the production of the Journal by organizing the proofreading, layout, associated with the production of Notornis and by maintaining a close working relationship with the printer of Notornis. An Editorial Board is available to support the Editor.

The Society wishes to support Society members to write up their observations and scientific studies and it is a role of the Editor to stimulate and support authors and prospective authors to effect the submission and publication of appropriate reports & papers on ornithology.

Requirements include general word-processing and computer skills, broadband access to the internet, the ability to work to deadlines, some knowledge of birds and a reasonable grasp of English grammar.